I love taking photos of my dog. He's an incredibly sweet boy, and he's helped me more than he could ever know. He's taught me what I'm truly like as a person, as a caregiver and helped me understand more about behaviour in animals, including humans.

I love being outdoors with him, and taking him to new places and new environments – and I'm genuinely like a proud dad seeing him make new friends with all the other dogs.

He unfortunately has hip dysplasia in both his back legs, but I'm here to help him and support him with it and provide him with unconditional love, support, play, encouragement and more – and yes, clean up his poop.

I have loved seeing Charlie grow and develop, he's doing so well. I feel a huge sense of pride everytime I see him either meet a new friend, learn a new trick or command or just seeing the look of pure happiness on his face when we go to the beach or for a long walk in the woods.

I truly can't imagine life without him; he's provided so much happiness in my life, and continues to everyday. I know everything about him, from his favourite foods and treats, to his most loved toys and places to visit. He truly means everything to me.

With all the rush and overwhelm from being highly sensitive, I love being outdoors and 'off the grid'. I find so much peace in just the wonder of nature. The smell of freshly cut grass or the sound of flowing water from a nearby river; and I love using photography to highlight the beauty of places close to where I live.

You can find beauty in anywhere, it just depends on what internal lens you're looking through.

I've spent years learning about how to heal the mind and body; and I truly feel relaxed when I'm outdoors. I feel grounded when I can just take in the environment around me; and I love how photographs can show the true beauty of nature, with little to no editing; or how you can create a mood or a vibe by trusting your intuition.

I walk the same routes nearly everyday, and they never look the same; and I love the unpredictability of what the next time will look like.

I never really explored filming or making videos until the last 3/4 years. In my previous role of employment, I managed to cut my teeth into Premiere Pro and Final Cut – and take the time to learn as much as I can from editing styles, techniques, transitions, colour grading and more.

I love story telling, and am currently in the process of making my own movie – it's been a huge project to undertake on my own but I'm enjoying the process and having full creative control and I'm looking forward to releasing the finished product.

I've linked some of my best and most recent video work for anyone to see; a selection of videos for my music project, Two Places – and a handful of corporate videos for various clients in my previous role of employment.

All videos were directed, shot and edited by myself using Premiere Pro/Final Cut Pro.

design.

I truly love design. I use my intuition and awareness to take in all the requirements and ideas from the client and take so much care with my work; from taking the time to research the brand and learn about how they market themselves online, to spending time moving images from px to px because I always strive for perfection.

Here's a variety of the designs that I've made in my previous role of employment.

Majority of these designs have been from scratch, including this document. I always try to take what was done previously and make it better.

I'm always wanting to further and develop my skillset in anyway I can.

Displayed are the applications I use on a regular basis for design, editing, workflow and task management.
